Craig Jonas, Ph.D.
Chief Executive Officer & Founder
since May 2018

Dr. Craig Jonas is a lifelong entrepreneur with success across business, academic, and athletic industries. Craig has over 30 years of experience in management with a passion for team-building and drawing individuals with big ideas together.

Craig founded CoPeace in 2018 after serving as COO of Basketball Travelers and BTI Events, an elite sports event management and media conglomerate, for over 20 years. In his role, Craig supervised international sporting events and tours worldwide. He served as the head or deputy head of the American delegation for the Summer and Winter World University Games from 2007-17.

Craig has always had a passion for bringing true impact to global sport, supporting the idea that sports can bring cultures and people closer together. He was one of the first American coaches to travel to South Africa post-apartheid to host basketball clinics for local youth. Craig also represented the United States at the International Olympic Academy in Greece after earning national basketball "Coach of the Year" honors.

Previously, Craig served as vice president for business development for the broadcast media technology firm, Sportvision, best known for bringing revolutionary visual enhancements to live sports broadcasts, including American football's yellow first-down line and baseball's strike zone. Prior to Sportvision, Craig served as the executive vice president of Coach's Edge and helped initiate its $100-million merger with Sportvision.

Craig earned his doctorate in conflict management from the University of Kansas, where he also taught leadership, marketing, and management courses to undergraduate and masters students. As an undergraduate student, Craig attended Carleton College in Minnesota, and went on to complete his graduate degree at Colorado State University. Craig is a father of two sons. He lives with his wife, Seanna, and dog, Fergus, in Colorado.

Meg Masten

Chief Relationship Officer

since May 2018

Meg Masten joined CoPeace during its founding in May 2018, developing the role of Chief Relationship Officer. Meg brings a diverse background to the CoPeace leadership team, centered around serving people, solving problems, and achieving goals.

Prior to joining CoPeace, Meg worked with Basketball Travelers, Inc., directly overseeing international sporting events and successful grant applications to provide student-athletes with travel opportunities.

Previously, Meg practiced physical therapy for over 20 years, specializing in spinal cord injury and geriatric care. During her time as a health professional, Meg served hospitals, clinics, community outreach services, and home care. In addition, she extensively evaluated equity, socioeconomic factors, costs, and policy surrounding the public healthcare system. She founded Daisy Power, LLC, which provided workshops for moms and their young daughters, promoting self-esteem and positive body image, in addition to nutrition and fitness education.

Meg is a lifelong advocate for public education and community growth. For the past decade, she dedicated her volunteer time to informing, engaging, and organizing the community around public education. Meg managed several campaigns for Colorado Board of Education and State House candidates and led a grassroots effort to research and expose national influences on local elections, which attempted to dismantle and privatize the local education system.

Meg completed her undergraduate studies at Marquette University. She currently lives in Colorado with her husband and golden retriever. She is a proud mother of two.
